N. B.—The fact that this Overture is by the clever composer of the famous Luella Waltz, Silent Love Waltzes, Koonville Koonlets, etc., is a satisfactory guarantee that it is a superior work. Brilliant and very melodious, but not at all difficult for an overture.

The Speedway Galop is another new composition by the same writer- Very easy. A spontaneous "hit." Has "caught on" with more rapidity than any other piece put out by the publisher. Combination and prices same as "Cupids on Parade."

March and Two-Step.—"Cupids on Parade," by Geo. L. Lansing.

150 Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar players are rehearsing and will perform this piece (and also "Among the Flowers") at a Grand Festival to be given in Boston, January 22.

Full Orchestra and Piano, $1.15; Piano Solo, 50c; 1st Mandolin, 30; 2nd Mandolin, 10c; 3rd Mandolin, 15c; Mandola, (Octave tuning) 15c; 1st Banjo, 40c; 2nd Banjo, 15c; 1st Guitar, 30c; Guitar Acc., 10c; Piano Acc. 20c; Any Orchestra part, 15c.

Mr. Lansing is the composer of the famous Darkies' Dream, Darkies' Patrol, etc. We consider this march his best since the two mentioned were published.

CAPRICE.—"Among the Flowers," by Paul Eno.

This is a dainty little affair by the wellknown and popular Philadelphia Club Director and Composer. Prices and combinations same as "Cupids on Parade."

PIECE DESCRIPTIVE.—"Dance of the Skeletons," by Thos. S. Allen.

The popular Orchestra Director and the composer of "Goddess of Night Overture," "Behind the Hounds,," etc. You can hear and see "all kinds of things" while this piece is being played. Prices and combinations same as "Cupids on Parade.

GAVOTTE.—"The Magician, by Van L. Farrand.

This is the last work by the late lamented young composer. His "Prince of India," "Story Teller Walzes," "Pixies," etc., are as popular with Bands and Orchestras as for the Mandolin, Banjo and Guitar, the instruments for which he composed them. Many have pronounced this, his last, the best.

Christmas Tide!

So much has been written about this wonderful season, that we scarcely dare venture to attempt more than the usual "compliments." We would like to be able to write a good deal on the subject, for it has a fascination for us. We feel sure that years hence, this greatest festival of the year will hold us in its thrall—or say, rather, under its spell—as strongly as it did in the sweet, odorous "may-days" of childhood.

The word "Christmas" wakens memories as glorious and tender as any lying dormant in the recesses of the mind. And occasionally we hit upon a minor key, for is there not a faint suggestion of the minor underlying even the merry major tones of Yule Tide?

It is an inspiring time—an impressive ending for the old year. Let us make the most of it, and wish even those whom we reluctantly term enemies, A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

WHAT, another change!

Yes, friends, one more; but you may take it for granted that any new move on the part of the MAJOR is for the better, in every way. This time, the arrangements are made partly so that we can give more music in each issue, and only brand new music at that. This adds four more pages to the MAJOR.

ONE of the important things a banjoist, mandolinist, or guitarist must do, if he would be a popular player and a master of his instrument, is to be continually reading new music. No one can become a master who confines himself to a few favorite compositions. He may, of course, be a master of these compositions, but not a master of the instrument. There are many players who have fallen into a habit of playing nothing but their own compositions. Very few of these players are fluent sight readers, while many cannot perform anything like actual sight-reading at all. The only remedy is to read as much new music as one can procure. Some of it may be of small value, artistically,—but what of that? If read through twice or three times, it is a step towards better sight reading, and as such it serves a good purpose.

Don't be afraid to buy music through an advertisement. Sheet music is low-priced, and is getting better in quality with each season.

Practically, sight-reading is the playing of a piece of music set before one for the first time.

Stop trying new music, and your ability to read at sight rapidly decreases.

THE season is again in full swing. It was much later this year, September and October being strangely dull. But naw everyone is busy. Some teachers in the same building as the MAJOR office have even been forced to ask others to take pupils off their hands, being themselves unable to handle all applications. The New York Conservatory of Music has been hunting high and low for an additional assistant instructor at twenty dollars a week.

Our two-column pages will please advertisers more than the three-column pages. Each "Ad." stands a better chance of attention.

Ladies and the Banjo.

THERE is no small musical instrument more suited to ladies than the banjo. There is no muscle-fatigue with it, and it is not only a fine solo instrument, but an agreeable accompaniment to the voice. When artistically made, it is of most graceful appearance—the long, slender neck, the ornate peg-head, the round, white skin. It is easily held in position, and the strings require no force, while the narrow fingerboard permits of grace and ease of left-hand fingering. What more fascinating to the onlooker than a white hand, with tapering fingers and deliciously arched wrist thrown into bold relief by the black ebony fingerboard, with its tasteful inlaying of pearl ornamentations?

Sample Copies.

We send out a goodly number of sample copies. We do this for two reasons: First, as a canvass for new subscribers; Second, because sample copies quite frequently bring new customers to our advertisers. People who want to subscribe, after reading a sample copy always do so at the earliest convenience. Those who do not immediately decide to subscribe are perfectly welcome to the sample. They will, no doubt come along some day. A large percentage of our subscribers were secured by the ever-useful and valuable sample-copy method, and our list of subscribers is as big as any, which assertion we are ready to substantiate.

Our Music Supplement.

The music in this issue is well varied, and will suit all kinds of players. Les Debutantes, by W. S. Baxter, is a first class composition, while the page containing the three famous tunes arranged for banjo will be an agreeable change from the usual routine. Pupils will find the Air by Weber an easy tremolo piece and one that is worth learning to play well. The other pieces for guitar and banjo are by no means difficult.

Our next music supplement will contain gem numbers specially composed for the MAJOR by Richard L. Weaver, Billy A. Griffin and F. L. Keates.

Just A Lighted Banjo in the Sky.

Come, listen, gentle reader,
I will tell you something new;
It's a story that I'd have you not deny.
That yellow, shiny moon,
Like a small, fat, round balloon,
Is just a lighted banjo in the sky.

There lived a banjo player,
And his strings were always false;
With grief he very nearly used to cry.
At last he got so "ratty,"
And so awfully angry that he—
Kicked his banjo clean into the sky.

The peg-head struck the heavens,
Breaking through the azure shell;
The thumb-peg caught, and held it up on high;
And that's the simple reason
That the moon-yarn's out of season,
For it's just a lighted banjo in the sky.

—F. L. Keates.

C. J. Levin.

On our front page we present the latest picture of Mr. C. J. Levin, the famous mandolin artist of Baltimore. Mr. Levin is justly celebrated for the pure, musical tone he produces, as well as for beautiful interpretation of classic works and marvelous finger gymnastics. To hear Mr. Levin is to long to be a mandolinist. His work is conscientious in the highest degree, and he obtains his effects legitimately and artistically.

Mr. Levin is kept busy with concert work and teaching. His studio is at 331 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Md., where he strives with characteristic conscientiousness to advance the artistic musical education of his many pupils.

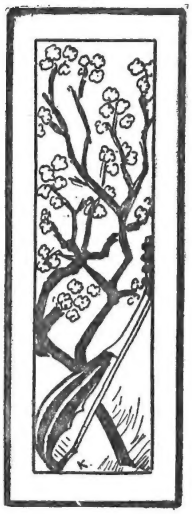
Note.

The Agnew Music Company writes, November 15th: Our 20th century methods are going "bully." Had an order from Elule, Kanai, Hawaii, through our MAJOR ad.

J. E. AGNEW.

How to Manage a Mandolin Club.

By Harry F. Battey.



THERE is nothing in the management of any business which will so impede progress as having so many officers that the business becomes everybody's business (or nobody's business). I feel that this is a great failing with many clubs.

If you would have your club reach the acme of success, engage a business manager. The leader will have enough to do if he properly looks after the music of the club; but as he has the general responsibility of the club, let him secure a man of ability to act as business manager.

When this has been done, let him have the complete management of the business. If you are to be so managed, it is very important that you use care and judgment in choosing the manager. Try to secure a man with push and ability; one who is socially liked, and who is popular and successful in other business. Your club's success will depend on this. Let all calls on the club be referred to the business manager. By this arrangement you can work smoothly.

The leader's duty should be to cultivate the musical work of the club. The manager must labor to secure engagements where the club may manifest its musical ability.

Strive to move onward and upward. The club that remains in the same sphere for two or three years becomes a back number. The people will not support any unprogressive business. You must be up-to-date. And so, especially in the music business, the key to success is progressiveness.

Never forget that the musical direction of a club and its management are two distinct offices.

If a leader must be the whole thing, there should be nothing but the very best of reasons for it.

A leader may be a capable man as a musician, but may lack that kind of business ability known as "push," or his time may be limited. One is as bad as the other.

When the club reaches a degree of proficiency worthy of applause, the press and people will be ready to help you. Don't get conceited. Beware! for when you think you are perfect you begin to travel the backward path. No one loves the boaster, but modesty is admired everywhere. Always remember there are better performers than you or I, who have not been heard from yet, and some day (like Farland or Abt) will appear before us.

Give an active young business man an up-to-date programme worthy of support, and I am sure the management will prove ideal.

An improved banjo peg will be on the market shortly. It will do away with the truly exasperating threading of the strings through a small hole—a task not at all soothing if one has not a good light, or if the string persists in curling up at the end.

Joseph W. Stern & Co., New York, have secured, by special contract, exclusive control of the famous music catalogue of O. H. Albrecht, including the celebrated Armstrong Class Studies, and the widely popular Albrecht "methods."

Every teacher should add the banjo to his or her teaching. The demand for instruction is increasing rapidly.

HOW VAN NESS OBLIGED THE COMPANY.

By F. L. Keates.

PRESENTLY, Van Ness tore a fifteen-inch chromatic run from his banjo, stopped short and said, "She'll be there tonight, and they say she's all broken up on the banjo well played."

"You'll be safe, then," said Bob Heath, a college mate, sarcastically.

"Oh, I think I ought to 'catch on' some. I'll play 'Marriage Bells.' Jameson says she's learning that herself."

"All right, old man," laughed Bob, in what was scarcely his natural manner. "Go in and win. She's heaps of money.

The home of the Kestler's—where the evening party and dance was to be given—was two miles from the college. Snow lay on the ground, and the night was marked by a harsh, penetrating frostiness particularly unsuited to a banjo's health. So Van Ness, who had great solicitude for the well-being of his instrument, tucked a big square of white flannel around the head and rim before depositing it in its leather case. That done, he laid it on the table, and leaving his room with Bob Heath, hurried away to interview a barber.

* * * * *

Mabel Carew shone like a star that evening at Kestler's, but like a star, she seemed a trifle cold—at least when Van Ness persisted in hanging around her, like a bee on a honeysuckle vine.

Van Ness was tremendously in love (or thought he was, which is just as bad), and as love-lorn swains will, he made himself not a little ridiculous—a fact which the swains themselves never realize (for love is blind, you know).

But all this was to be remedied when the banjo was produced. In the college parlance of Van Ness, he was to "knock her." Not very learned language, but quite collegiate and expressive.

The moment came. Mrs. Kestler whispered to her son, and the youth left the room for a moment, to reappear with Van Ness's brown-leather banjo case in his hand.

There was a flutter of expectancy as Van Ness took the case and began to unbuckle the straps.

"Oh, I do so love the banjo!" gushed a fair-haired girl, putting her naiad-like form through a series of willowy contortions betokening extreme ecstacy.

Van Ness had a sudden fugitive thought that maybe she was as nice as Mabel Carew. (Oh, Man! Oh, Flattery!).

Opening the case, he put his hand in and drew forth the flannel, with a flourish.

——Gracious heavens! It was not the flannel at all!

Van Ness, suddenly paralyzed in every limb, was holding up a ragged white shirt!

Everyone saw it—Mabel Carew saw it—the fair-haired naiad saw it.

Van Ness glared at it, and thought of Bob Heath. And Mabel Carew, who was seated on the piano-stool with her back to the piano, turned and played almost inaudibly:

"I don't want to play in your yard,
I don't like you any more," .

And Van Ness felt like a frog in a whirlpool.

REPORTS

J. W. McLouth, of Grand Rapids, Mich., says that the teaching business is very good in this city.

N. S. Lagatree, Detroit, Mich., is making remarkable headway, and is rapidly increasing his fame as an artistic soloist on banjo and mandolin.

F. S. Gerrish is now one of A. A. Farland's associate teachers at the Farland studios, New York city.

The big festival billed for January 22d, in Boston, which Mr. Walter Jacobs is working on like a horse, will be a grand affair and is an assured success. Teachers from all parts will attend.

Fred. Stuber and his banjo are being kept busy week in week out, and he always makes a "hit."

The guitar is as quiet as ever, the mandolin increases in popularity, and the banjo numbers many new adherents daily. January and February will see big business done.

Charles and Miss Fannie Heinline are anxious to give a recital in Philadelphia. Miss Heinline is, we believe, the cleverest lady banjoist now before the people.

Johnson Bane continues to give very successful guitar recitals in all parts of the country. Mr. Bane is doing more for the guitar than than anyone in America. No one can please an audience like he.

Thomas J. Armstrong, O. H. Albrecht, Paul Eno, and Richard L. Weaver (whose studios are all in the same building, to say nothing of several others whose reports we have received) are extremely busy. They are, in fact, "rushed," and can scarcely accommodate all applicants for instruction.

Fred. Stuber is engaged on the Orpheum Circuit.

F. L. Keates is preparing a new series of banjo articles on how to play the banjo. They will probably be published in book-form later, but will appear in the MAJOR first.

"Grace Notes"

AH! I fancy I hear the sound of sweet bells stealing on the air—Christmas bells; and methinks that squeal which comes faintly to my ears emanates from the cherry lips of my landlady's daughter, who, if I am not mistaken, has dropped a Christmas plum-pudding too abruptly into the boiling-pot, and splashed herself with hot water. Everything is redolent of Yuletide. The north wind has helped things along amazingly well by breathing on the trees and on the window-panes, leaving them enameled chastely white. That is, up North, here. What you fellows feel like down South, I don't know. At any rate, I wish you all a Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year, North, South, East and West.

Like the instrument itself, the word "banjo" is so unique that it is hard to find words that will rhyme with it. Try it. A man once said there was no rhyme to "Timbuctoo," but another man wrote something to this effect:

"The cannibal savages of Timbuctoo
Ate up a preacher and his hymn-book, too."

After that we can't give up the search for rhymes to "banjo."

Mr. Thomas Nichols, the prominent teacher of Syracuse, N. Y., told me the following: Lewis, the old-time banjo maker, once re-headed a banjo for an enthusiastic youth, and charged him $4—a high price, even in those days.

"That's awful high for a banjo skin, isn't it?" ventured the victim.

"Oh, well," said Lewis, in a business-like manner, "there are skins and skins, you know. I can give you one for only a dollar, but this $4 one, my dear sir, is genuine corn-fed calf!"

It's a poor musician that can't blow his own horn; and yet it is often the case that the louder the "blow" the poorer the musician.

It's an ill tune that does nobody any good.

A banjo in hand is worth two in the pawnshop.

"Two heads are better than one," as Mr. Farland said, when he was stretching a reserve skin.

Every banjoist has a snap. But beginners have never been heard to call it a "soft snap."

"I got it right in the neck that time," as the banjo said, when the maker bored the hole for the thumb-peg.

There are some undoubtedly well-intentioned people who do a peculiar and unecessary thing when sending their subscription to a journal. Instead of sending silver or a money order, they send stamps. Well, that would not be very bad if they wonld send one or two-cent stamps. But, no, they choose five or ten-cent ones, and unless the publisher hawks them around and sells them at a loss, they lie in the stamp-drawer and grow old, and sad and weary, and the one and two-cent varieties laugh at them. Rather mean of the "one's" and "two's," but they get licked for it all right.

Owed to Christmas.

Delightful time of fuss and cheer,
Of port and punch and 'pop' and beer;
Of laughter loud, and uncurbed jest;
Of mistletoed innocents kissed with zest;
Of happy hours of yarn and song;
Of hanging stockings, black and long;
Of goose and pudding well discussed
Until our waistcoat's fit to—surrender its buttons under severe internal pressure.
Break.
But, oh! the sad, dyspeptic ills,
The nightmare and the liver pills!

The Regal Wood Rim Art Banjo

Represents the greatest revolution and highest achievement known to musical instrument making in the history of this country

A real sustained tone could never be acquired on the old style metal rim banjo, hence the instrument was always discarded as unsatisfying to a true musician, and in this insrrument alone is demonstrated the fact that the banjo is worthy of a thorough course of study, as a satisfying return may be obtained by the most ambitious student.

Many eminent soloists state that the new Regal Banjo will at once bring about the revival of Banjo music far surpassing its old time furore, as the new instrument will attract and hold its admirers from a true musical standpoint, and not simply as a popular fad.

Our booklet, "The Evolution of the Banjo," treats of the subject at length, and will be cheerfully mailed free to anyone interested.
